What are your views on joining up sets of records held on parents and children?

- This is an online survey asking your views about combining sets of records held on parents and children. It is being conducted by academics at the universities of Southampton and Westminster to help inform our research project on data linkage.
- You are invited to participate in our survey if you live in the UK and have children aged 16 or under. Completing the survey should take you about 5 minutes or so.
- Your participation in the survey is voluntary. You can opt out at any point, and we will not use the information you give us unless you press submit at the end.
- The information that you give us will be confidential, and you will be anonymous we will not be able to tell who you are. But if you would like to be entered into a draw for a £100 high street voucher, then we will provide you with information about how to do that at the end of the survey. Your email address will not be linked to your answers.
- The survey information will be kept securely in a password protected electronic format, and only be used for our research purposes. The survey has received ethical approval from the University of Southampton Research Ethics Committee (ERGO ID 46736). If you have any questions about the survey, you can email us on: r.s.edwards@soton.ac.uk and y.gillies@westminster.ac.uk

Government departments and services hold a lot of separate sources of information about families, such as where they live, their ethnicity, parents' income and benefit claims, children's educational attainment, health records, contact with social services, and so on. Government is able to join together these different records and other information, or it can commission companies to do this for them.

Have you heard about this 'data linkage' before?
